

RADICAL STATISTICS 6

This issue of Radical Statistics has been edited with the now traditional permissiveness - everything received went in. The most important contribution, it seems to me, is the provisional policy statement to which I hope there will be plenty of reaction either in writing or live at the general meeting at LSE on 4 June (bar at 5.30, subsequently in Room E199).

My only regret is the lack of laughs - I know, since I spent some time looking for some, that statistical humour is hard to come by, but I feel ~~that~~ future editors would be pleased to have a few cartoons or written flippancies (original or pirated) if only to fill the odd spaces at the bottoms of pages. It was suggested at the AGM that each issue of Radical Statistics should print the name and address of the editor(s) of the next; my problem is that no-one has yet offered to take on the editing of number 7 - I suggest that any contributions for the next issue be sent to me at 105 Noel Road, London N 1 and I will forward them to whoever it is.

Don't forget to look at the last page.
