

News from the Radical Statistics Troika

Your intrepid organising committee have been meeting monthly by Skype (no venues to organise, no transport costs, and not much body language).

Together with several other RadStats volunteers, we have a few things getting to a stage where they will bear fruit, so watch out for the following. This is written in early August and by the time it is published you may have already come across some of them:

- Credit-card sized adverts for Radical Statistics pointing to its website, as an additional promotion to the printed membership application leaflets.
- A Radical Statistics blog on cuts in statistics, world-wide.
- The next round of the Radical Statistics essay competition, organised by Alan Marshall and Lee Williamson.
- Fringe meetings at professional conferences.
- Radical Statistics materials at the Young Statisticians Meeting supported by the Royal Statistical Society.
- A special Radical Statistics newsletter on the cuts in the UK¹.
- Radical Statistics Conference, Saturday 26th February 2011 in Leeds.

In addition, we'd like to appeal to you to join in by sending contributions for the newsletter, or contacting us with any proposal you think should interest us.

Eileen Magnello, David Manley, Ludi Simpson.

We can be contacted together at troika@radstats.org.uk

¹ Issue 103 is entitled 'The Cuts' and will be edited by Paul Spicker and Ludi Simpson.